Fifteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

10th July 2022

Readings: Deuteronomy 30:10-14    Colossians 1:15-20    Luke 10:25-37

Reflection

The universalist vision of the gospel noted in the reflections for the previous two Sundays, covering Luke 9:51–10:20, comes to the fore only a few verses later. No-one mentions Samaritans as often as Luke. Mark never mentions Samaria or the Samaritans. Matthew mentions them to prohibit the Twelve going to them as they are sent before Jesus. John has a major scene with a Samaritan woman, and another reference. In today's gospel a Samaritan is famously put forward as a hypothetical exemplar of being neighbourly. The question put to Jesus by the lawyer, "What must I do to inherit eternal life?", at first seems disconnected from anything that had preceded it, but it instigates this exploration of a point that is of critical importance to the gentile Luke: the gospel is for all people. This universalist theme emerges only when the lawyer is coaxed to answer his own question from the source of his life's work, Torah, the Law. He replies with the twofold summation of the Law: love God with your whole self (Deuteronomy 6:5), and love your neighbour as yourself (Leviticus 19:18, 34).

It is misguided to say that this twofold summary was original to Jesus. Luke reports the lawyer himself, not Jesus, as giving this summary, and so the gospel itself stands as witness to this summary forming part of then contemporary Jewish thought; it was a commonly held point of view, well evidenced in later rabbinic documents too. The claim that our Lord invented it should be abandoned. What may still have been at issue with some at the time was what "neighbour" really means. If Leviticus 19:18 is read as an isolated rule then it applies only to compatriots, Jews, and not to others. But a few verses later we have another rule directing that the resident or visiting foreigner (an alien of any kind) is to be treated as a native (a citizen). The like of Exodus 12:43-49, using different terminology, further complicates a simple understanding of who each is, especially when it concludes that, at least concerning the original Passover, there is to be one law for both the "native" and the "foreigner"—but since the Hebrews, who in the story were born in Egypt, later call themselves the sojourners or aliens in the story we find that the Law applies the terms like "native" and "alien" ambiguously to both Jews and gentiles. We may well argue that the Exodus formulation reflects the later legal setting, but within the story itself, that is, in Scripture, the usual or common-sense applications are upended. Thus in discussions over the Law we find that both the Jew and the gentile are not so easily distinguishable and a neighbour may be either.

Luke's account has the lawyer focus on that question about who may be called "my neighbour". It is unfortunate then that the way Luke tells it inadvertently lent support to later anti-Jewish sentiment, for it allowed it to be seen as evidence of obstinate Jewish contrariness. This was further exacerbated by the invented rationales offered by preachers and teachers as to why a priest and a Levite might not want to become involved with the stricken man; the story does not present any idea of a defence based on purity laws. After all, as a parable it is work of fiction composed to explore an idea by presenting a hypothetical case. But in a perverse way the later name given this parable, "The Good Samaritan", further plays into this, for it can be seen to suggest that Samaritans, indistinguishable from Jews to later Christians, are likewise not normally "good"; that this fictitious Samaritan can be so called underlies the sense that generally they are not, or at least were seen as not by Jews. A more accurate title would be "The Good Neighbour".

Ultimately the question is not "Who is my neighbour?", which is passive, but "How am I to be a neighbour?", which is about action. The Christian teachings are clear: since we are all children of God, each is to be neighbour to all.

Faith Matters: Naidoc Week

This Sunday marks the end of Naidoc Week. Let us acknowledge the Traditional Custodians who have walked upon and cared for this land for thousands of years. We acknowledge the continued deep spiritual attachment and relationship of the First Nations Peoples to this Country and commit ourselves to the ongoing journey of Reconciliation.

Settling Prayer:

God of all wonder,
 We pause in the busyness of our days to listen deeply to the wisdom of this land and those who belong to it.
 May our minds be open to dialogue,
 May our hearts be open to transformation and
 May our hands do the work of reconciliation.
 We ask that the Spirit accompany us on our journey of healing on these lands, seas and waterways;
 We also ask the Spirit of peace be with all those who are living a life of fear, dispossession and distress.
 We make this prayer in the name of Jesus
 our brother and friend. Amen.

Plenary Council Prayer

Come, Holy Spirit of Pentecost.

Come, Holy Spirit of the great South Land.

O God, bless and unite all your people in Australia and guide us on the pilgrim way of the Plenary Council.

Give us the grace to see your face in one another and to recognise Jesus, our companion on the road.

Give us the courage to tell our stories and to speak boldly of your truth.

Give us ears to listen humbly to each other and a discerning heart to hear what you are saying.

Lead your Church into a hope-filled future, that we may live the joy of the Gospel.

Through Jesus Christ our Lord, bread for the journey from age to age.

Amen.

Our Lady Help of Christians, pray for us.

St Mary MacKillop, pray for us.
